

Electrical Competence Training

Tourers & Motorhomes

2 Day Course

Under the Electricity at Work Regulations 1989, all employers have a duty to ensure that employees are competent to carry out any electrical duties expected of them. To protect caravan businesses, the National Caravan Council has defined what constitutes electrical competence for electrical inspection of touring caravans and motorhomes as part of a standard service. This assessed course will show that employers have proof of the competence of their workshop staff.

This course is designed to ensure that engineers are safe when carrying out their day to day duties, that all legal requirements are met, and that they can sign off a range of limited specified electrical work as required within their usual duties.

What the course will give you

On completion of the course, delegates will be able to:

- ⚡ Know of the relevant safety legislation
- ⚡ Create and maintain a safe system of work
- ⚡ Know electrical terms and relationships
- ⚡ Understand protection against electric shock and burns
- ⚡ Determine circuit protection
- ⚡ Define earthing and bonding
- ⚡ Safe use of hand tools
- ⚡ Carry out inspection and test of a caravan or motor home
- ⚡ Documentation

Successful assessment will give a Certificate of Competence.

It will be possible to use this Certificate of Competence as evidence of prior learning towards the electrical module of the forthcoming NVO Level 2 in Caravan Servicing (in development).

This course is not suitable for complete beginners. All delegates should have some prior basic electrical training or supervised experience before applying for this course.

This course will run on two consecutive days. Each course will take a maximum of 10 people. The cost includes training, assessment, course materials, certification, and a light buffet lunch on all days. Accommodation if required is not included. All other terms and conditions apply
